

WHAT HAPPENS IN A BLAST?

Glass is often the weakest part of a building, breaking at low pressures compared to concrete and steel. The blast pressure is typically measured in pounds per square foot (psf) or kilopascals (kPa).

